Terrain, snow conditions and ski tracks quality:

Flat ridge with mountain meadows and scattered buildings. North part of the area covered by forest on Kobyla Mountain (897 m). Altitude 730 – 897 m.

There is continuous layer of snow depending on altitude and exposure to wind at the event area. The highest areas from 820 to 860 meters have from 20 to 40 centimeters of snow and it is possible to ski on forest tracks. The altitude between 750 and 820 meters has from 10 to 20 centimeters of snow and some limited places are covered minimally (earth banks, earth walls etc.). The altitude below 750 meters has larger areas without snow.

Old snow is frozen, there are some places with ice in the forest – it was not snowing for a month. There is about 5 cm of newer powder snow on top of the old snow. It is possible to use good skis. Damage to skis can happen very rarely in case a bad route choice is taken (crossing earth banks, crossing melted places on meadows – little brooks, icy places in forest with little branches and cones).

Ski tracks are maintained on top of old frozen snow layer. Therefore the tracks are not that well visible and there are also some old shortcuts made by other skiers in the past (that are not mapped). All snow mobile and snow machine tracks are mapped. Use not only ski tracks to navigate but also other map objects.

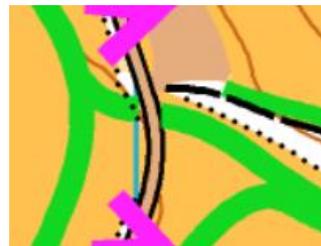

Tracks classification: Full thick green line: snow machine with track for classic style, width more than 3 m - 58% of tracks
Full thin green line: snow machine or snow mobile – worse quality of surface, width 3 m 10%
Dashed green line: snow mobile, width 0,8-1,5 m 32%

Crossing of roads: Courses are crossing local roads on several places. Please take care. Places that are marked with symbol 708 Crossing point (ISOM 2000) will be maintained during the event to enable crossing without taking off the skis (carpet, layer of snow). Roads out of these crossing are not covered by snow and there is gritting applied (gravel, sand).
